Sister Rogeria Timschock

Sister M. Rogeria, formerly Mary Timsok of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, died of tuberculosis at the Motherhouse in the twenty-fourth year of her age and the seventh of her religious career. Sister Rogeria was a very successful teacher and was much beloved by her pupils. Her companions, too, found her to be an agreeable associate and above all a good religious. When first taken ill she found it difficult to be reconciled, but she succeeded admirably in overcoming nature and her death was an edification to all who witnessed it.
